Fundamental analysis summary

Fastly is a service dedicated to computer developers and companies present on the web. It offers secure and fast cloud services. It is active in a fast growing sector. It has very little debt and its revenues have increased by 62% YoY. They are making losses but see their losses decreasing year after year, a direction towards financial profitability. They are very aggressive on marketing which creates the loss. However, they have a large cash position, which allowed them to acquire one of their competitor: Signal Sciences for USD 775 million in stock and cash.

Technical analysis summary

Fastly made its IPO May 2019 at a price of USD 21. It is now at USD 94. The share has benefited from a nice growth due to the increase in internet traffic following the preventive measures of COVID-19. Its ATH is at USD 117 and it seems to be heading in that direction. It has a market cap of 9 billion.
